Hi Liam, this is great, thank you. Here's a brief description for you:

The Rick Hansen Foundation (RHF) has developed a universal accessibility standard in the built environment through an RHF Accessibility Certification (RHFAC) program, similar to LEED certification. It is a voluntary program that goes beyond the building code. Twenty Nova Scotia assessors were trained through the RHFAC program in May 2018. The Cogswell District Redevelopment Project presents an opportunity for RHF Accessibility Certification to be applied to the public and private lands within the Cogswell District.

Outcome: RHF Accessibility Certification applied to the public and private lands within the Cogswell District

Drop me a line if there's anything else you need,

Josh
