Subject: [External Email] Presenting to the board of police commissioners

[This email has been received from an external person or system]

Hello again,

Yesterday after sending my email there was a board of police commissioners meeting and one of the chairs pulled me aside and explained the role of presentations and the rules around them and encouraged me to request to present again with my new understanding of the process. And a better understanding of how to explain what I want to talk about, because I now understand how relating it to a specific complaint about me impacts this process.

So with that said, I would like to make two presentations to the board on the following issues:

How the extra duty policy as implemented with reference specifically to police in grocery stores can lead to a decreased court capacity and an over-policing of vulnerable people and

The use of polygraphs by the HRP is or has the potential to violate section seven of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

Please let me know what the next steps are.

Cheers,
